OCCUPATION OF RUHR DISTRICT MAY BE DELAYEDLloyd George Said to Favor Ultimatum to Germany Before Step Is Taken.*BERLIN NOT AT END STRING*Advises from Capital Reflect Readiness to Submit New Proposals in View of New Report. Ones Have Been Rejected. Bernstein Speaks.*By Associated Press.*LONDON, April 29.—French occupation of the Ruhr district of Germany, it appears, will not begin as soon as was expected, early this week. Details of the plans, formulated by Marshal Foch and his subordinates, will be discussed tomorrow by the Supreme Allied council but it appeared probable today that the march into Germany's richest coal and industrial region, if ordered, will not be initiated until late next week.*Germany's reparations proposals will not be formally discussed at Saturday's meeting, it was indicated here. Premier Briand had an engagement to confer with Prime Minister Lloyd George immediately after his arrival here from Paris and it seemed probable an informal meeting of Allied representatives might be held during the day.*Advices from Berlin have reflected a readiness on the part of the German government to make new proposals in place of those sent to Washington for possible dispatch to the Allies.*BERLIN, April 29.—Criticism leveled at the German cabinet's appeal to President Harding in the reparations question, was calculated to weaken still further the position of Germany abroad, declared Count von Bernstorff, former ambassador to the United States in his maiden speech before the Reichstag yesterday. Supporting the German note to Washington the former ambassador deprecated the temper of the debate.*PARIS, April 29.—Prime Minister Lloyd George of Great Britain would consent to the occupation of the Ruhr district of Germany only after an ultimatum granting certain amount of delay had been sent to Germany, says the London correspondent of the Martin. He declared he takes this attitude in order to "appear more inclined against penalties."*WASHINGTON, April 29.—President Harding and his cabinet are understood to have discussed the German reparations proposals again today. Secretary Hughes, laying before them the views of the principal allied powers with regard to the offer. Meantime the American reply to the German communication was held up.*While the cabinet was considering the question it became known that Great Britain and Italy had not definitely rejected the German offer as unacceptable as a basis for negotiations. It was understood, however, that the French and Belgian views as transmitted to Hughes were that the terms were unacceptable.*According to information in usually well informed quarters, Secretary Hughes still is hopeful that negotiations between the allies and Germany can be reported. This said that even if a final decision is not reached before the French begin to move into additional German territory the exchanges can continue after that time.*REPORT MEMBERSHIPS*Cavassiers Will Complete Drive Over Weekend.*With several teams holding back in their total subscriptions, reports last night showed 30 new members for the Cavassiers of Ohio Y. M. C. A. in the campaign. The drive being conducted by the Cavassiers, a more complete report will be made this evening.*The new members are slow this year cavassiers report, especially among railroad men, mainly because of so many furloughs. The boys are showing a little added interest now that their memberships are about run out and the baseball season is only opening.*Two canvassers have pledged them selves to put forth extra effort over the weekend and to have a large turnout when the final report is made at a dinner on Monday evening.*Troop No. 8 to Hike.*Good day hike into the mountains will be taken by members of Boy Scout Troop No. 8 tomorrow. The boys will be under the leadership of Frank Brant. The hikers will assemble at the Biltmore & Ohio Y. M. C. The day is being observed by a number of the local schools.*MACHINE WHICH RAN DOWN BOY SPEEDING, CORONER'S JURY TOLD*Wilmer Haltliff Hurled Up to 65 Feet, Car Ran 342 Feet by Point of Collision, Witness Say.*A coroner's jury yesterday held Edward M. Gross for the action of the grand jury in the case in which it was charged Gross' car ran down and killed Wilmer Haltliff, who was riding in his wagon on the state road near Johnston school house, on April 20. The inquest was conducted by Coroner H. S. Baum at city hall. Gross gave $2,500 bail.*It was testified that the victim, of the accident, and another youth, John Kooper, had been riding down the road in a coaster wagon. Kooper saw the Gross' machine approaching and jumped off. The Haltliff lad, however, continued on, attempting to turn it from the right side of the road and out of the path of the automobile. At the same time, it was testified, Gross attempted to pass the child and the wagon was struck.*The force of the impact, witnesses said, threw the boy for a distance of 60 to 65 feet. The automobile was not stopped until it had run a distance of 243 feet, by actual measurement, the jury was told.*Testimony showed that Gross was traveling about 35 to 40 miles an hour when the accident occurred, although one witness said he passed the Gross' machine just previous to the accident and at that time it was making only about 10 miles an hour.*The boy died at the Cottage State hospital from a crushed skull, a broken neck and a broken pelvis.*Harry G. Mason, Thomas L. Howard, W. H. Pearson, H. C. Whipple, F. C. Conway and W. O. Adrian composed the jury.*Americanization School Will Have Big Graduate Class*The graduation of 400 men from the Americanization-Naturalization schools conducted in different parts of the country will be the principal feature of a public meeting to be held in the Uniontown High school building next Wednesday. The oath of allegiance will be administered to this class under conditions designed to create a lasting impression of its significance upon all persons present upon this occasion.*Judge E. H. Reppert will preside at the meeting. Addresses dealing with subjects relating to citizenship will be made by County Superintendent J. S. Carroll, Attorney E. O. Tabor, a recognized authority on Americanization, and A. J. West of the naturalization bureau.*Special classes have been instituted in different county localities and the 400 who will receive the oath administered have enrolled in these classes. The work of the teachers has been both pleasant and profitable. The results have been decidedly encouraging for a majority of those who have accepted, teachers say, have proved apt students, as is characteristic of their respective nationalities.*County Superintendent J. S. Carroll will present each of the 400 with diplomas in the "school of Americanization," representing certificates of merit in recognition of their completion of an Americanization course which is embodied in the essential qualities of citizenship, entitling the applicants for citizenship in the land of their adoption.*Dunbar Prepares For Greatest of Memorial Events*Special to The Courier.*DUNBAR, April 29.—Determining to have the largest turnout and demonstration on Memorial Day Dunbar has ever witnessed plans are already being laid for its accomplishment. As for a number of years past the Junior Order of United American Mechanics will have charge of the ceremonies, and with the order will be associated all Sunday schools, fraternal organizations and civic bodies.*The plans including several bands, of course Foster's Military band of Uniontown, the old boys who know how to play to reach the patriotic hearts of the people. Memorial Day in Dunbar would not be like itself without that band. Special invitations will be sent to all Sunday schools and churches, urging them to add their share toward making the coming celebration the very best in the town's history.*In addition to the local people there will be a number of members of Will Stewart Post, G. A. R. of Uniontown present to assist in the ceremonies and read the ritual of the order. All plans are being formed on liberal and patriotic lines and the hearty cooperation of all the people without regard to creed or faith, is most cordially invited.*Boys' First Circus.*The skeleton of the man found in the woods of Ferguson hollow, near Dunbar, will be held at Funeral Director J. Owing to numerous discussions in the House over bills and last-day protests against administration and appropriation bills, the session scheduled to close at noon did not adjourn until after 6 o'clock but the clocks were solemnly placed at 12 so that the legislative action could be maintained.*The last hour was devoted to clearing up bills between the two houses during which an amendment to a dog bill, wanted by the House, did not get back from the Senate and a controversy over judicial reappointment ended by the Senate receding from its stand and the bill passing. Then gifts were presented to officers.*Robert S. Spangler, the speaker, posed a few days ago, was given the gavel of the session, amid an ovation, and committees waited on the governor and on each House. The institute was designed to emphasize the necessity of the education of the younger people along missionary lines. The state of Pennsylvania is being used as a trial state by the Baptist denomination to further missionary education.

The afternoon devotions were in charge of Rev. G. M. Riley of Fahrance. The convention was divided into groups, addressed or taught as classes, by Mrs. C. A. Swift and Miss Luella Barnes, both of Pittsburgh, who have organized a mission school in Bellevue and had on display very interesting work from their school. Mrs. J. A. Erbe and Rev. G. M. Riley had other classes, both bringing out the need of this kind of work in the church.

Mrs. C. F. Burke of Pittsburgh read a paper on "How to Organize Mission Study Classes." A. J. Schumaker of Pittsburgh demonstrated "The Bible School Map, Chart and Story."

Mrs. Swift dwelt on the children's missionary study books of last year and this year as taught in her school. The first was "Mr. Friend O' Man" and the next was "Lamplighters Across the Sea." Dinner was served in the church by the ladies of the congregation. One table was given over to the members of the World Wide Guild and was presided over by Mrs. W. W. Eicher.

The evening devotions were in charge of Rev. C. C. Rich, the pastor of the local church. Rev. C. A. Decker gave a talk on "The Organization of the School and the Objective of Education," and followed this with an illustrated lecture, "Children of the World." Girls of the World Wide Guild gave a play, "A Missionary Child," with Ethel Kromer in the role of physician; Wm. Bentorf, as nurse and the following patients, Mildred and Evelyn Prentiss, Elizabeth Rich, Mildred Stone, Gladys Kromer, Esther Howell and Dorothy Miller.

The delegates staying over night are being entertained in the homes.

Ministers Hold Conference

The ministers of the Monongahela Baptist association held a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. yesterday morning, conferring on mission work. Rev. C. M. Jones of the Scranton association, who has been doing missionary work in this association, gave a report, dwelling on the reorganization of the Jacob Creek church. Lunch was served to the ministers at the Y. M. C. A. with Rev. C. C. Rich as host. Coffees were had for 11.

Y. M. C. A. Officers

The Hi-Y club held dinner at the Y. M. C. A. last evening, covering being laid for 15. J. Lowell Miles gave a very interesting talk. Election of officers was held and resulted as follows: President, Lamar Glenn; vice-president, Gerald Loucks; secretary-treasurer, William Walther.

Bengtontown Boy Dies

Frank Bates, 16 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bates, died at his home at Bengtontown on Wednesday evening. The funeral was held this afternoon at Wesley chapel.

Need of Armory Emphasized.

Captain Edward Kennedy, of the Service Company of the 110th Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, yesterday received a shipment of 19 carbines and wagons. What to do with them is the problem confronting the captain, since there is no armory in the town. He has taken the matter up with Senator James B. Weaver, who has promised to do something, if possible, to relieve the situation. It is hoped steps will be taken at an early date toward securing an armory.

About Going Away

"Five years ago doctors told me I would have to move my wife to another climate, as she suffered so with stomach and liver trouble and bloating. Also, that she would have to have an operation for gallstones. Our mail carrier told me of May's Wonderful Remedy and, on his advice, she has taken it and is now as well as ever in her life." It was an unpopular view, to him and to all, for him to make sharp criticism of the geologist, but the outcome vindicated his judgment. While $25,000,000, approximately, was spent on the drilling of wells, only about $1,500,000 worth of gas was produced. If the speculators had listened to his advice they would have saved money.

Dr. Ashley points out in a report that has just been submitted to the secretary of internal revenue that many other dubious project in which Pennsylvaniaans are asked to invest money are "constantly being brought to his attention. Supposed oil, gas and coal "discoveries" are exploited in an artful manner. On the surface the claims appear plausible but when, as often happens, the department is asked to make an investigation it frequently develops that money put into the project would be lost to the investors. The state geologist finds that many people are gullible, and he warns against buying shares in oil, gas and coal projects in Pennsylvania which have not been investigated by competent authorities. If his advice should be heeded the dealers in shady stocks, who have been such a pest in this state, would lose a considerable part of their business.

RECOGNIZING IMPORTANCE OF THE SALVATION ARMY

The creation of an advisory board to the local Salvation Army corps will be the means of giving more general recognition to the Army. This agency has been doing work in Connellsville and vicinity for years without attracting very much public notice. Pursuing its quiet and unassuming way, its self-appointed mission as aid, encouragement and friend to the unfortunate and distressed, the Army has not invited publicity to the details of its methods. One result of this policy has been that comparatively few people know what the Salvation Army really is or what it is doing to justify its existence or appeal to the public for support.

An officially defined advisory board is another link between the Salvation Army and its work. It is simply a comprehensive committee which represents the Army and the public in the practical solution of the more aggravated welfare problems, understood to be the mind of training, the scientific treatment of sick cases, and which provides the community's share of Salvation Army maintenance.

The financing of the Army having been placed on the budget system three years ago through local campaign for funds for that purpose, the time and energies of the Army workers in the general community can now be given exclusively to the several forms of service the Army performs. As an agency to direct, extend or enlarge this service is one of the chief functions of the advisory board. It will not be burdened with any of the details of Army administration but in a broad way it will seek to bring the Army and its friends and supporters into a more cordial, sympathetic and understanding contact and by this means exalt the Army to a place of importance in the public economy to which its magnificent work and service entitle it.

PROMOTING AMERICANIZATION

The plan for making the admission of a class of about 400 aliens to citizenship the occasion of a large public meeting in Uniontown next Wednesday is wise. Instead of the perfunctory and unimpressive administration of the oath of allegiance, as usually administered, witnessed only by a few hangers-on about the court house who have very little interest in the proceedings, the arrangements provide that the occasion be given a more fitting setting and attended with a solemnity that will create a lasting impression upon all who take part in or witness the ceremonies.

Judge Reppert will preside at the meeting at which prominent speakers will make addresses dealing with the duties of citizenship and the advantages to be derived from becoming an American in all that the term implies.

The persons who will be formally made citizens upon this occasion are those who have completed the course of instruction in the Americanization schools, conducted in different parts of the county under state supervision, which is part of the nation-wide program for making new citizens. The pupils enrolled in these schools have shown a keen interest in the instruction imparted to them which is proof of their desire to become fully qualified for admission as full-fledged citizens.

Having satisfactorily completed the course of instruction the administration of the oath of allegiance to them will comprise the nature of graduation exercises and will leave a lasting impression upon them and their friends who witness the ceremony. This effect cannot be other than helpful both to the newly made citizens and to others who have not yet qualified to attain that proud distinction. By this means the work of Americanization will be promoted to aid in which should be the duty of every citizen having a concern for the future of our country.

Some Geological Ashley's Warning

Pittsburg Post

If there were no other reason for repaying confidence in him, the good record of the present geologist, George A. Ashley, would be enough. As we have the McKeesport gas boom would indicate, would suffice his opinions to reflect. In that case, after making a survey of the field, Dr. Ashley took a gloomy view concerning the prospects of investment, either in future

BALL SEASON TO OPEN TOMORROW IN YOUGH VALLEY

The baseball season in the Yough Valley will open tomorrow when the Independents and Trotters will meet in the lid. The Trotter aggregation has already been under fire twice this season and has broken even, winning one and losing one.

The Yough Valley Independents, tattered by F. A. Tarr, have been working diligently to get into condition and have all the earmarks of a first class ball team. The game tomorrow will give the fans their first opportunity to see the new nine in action.

The game will be called at 4:15 o'clock at the Dickerson Rubber Mfg. Co. ball field.

PERMIT MUST BE SECURED TO USE FAYETTE FIELD

It was announced last evening that they Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company, owner of Fayette Field, would require persons or baseball teams desiring to use that park for baseball games to secure a permit from either W. F. Underwood, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., or from H. L. Cordrey, division accountant, with offices at the railroad station.

Since spring has broken, the field has been almost continually used by one team or another. Frequently when it has been used, the field owner's aggregation would end another already on the grounds and to avoid this the railroad company is requiring that permission be secured. If the field is taken without a permit, it is announced, the railroad officers will prosecute. Permission will be granted willingly on open dates but trespassing will be severely dealt with.

The Coker Independents are becoming somewhat peevish at the continued inadmissions of Frank Tarr, backer of the Yough Valley Independents, that his team can take over the locals. The Connellsville management says Tarr must take into consideration that his team, though probably a good one, is entirely new and will have to put a few games under its belt before the Cokers can consider his aggregation a strong contender for honors.

NO NAVAL HEROES SAVED SHIPS AND MATES FROM BOMBS

which they suspected the U-boat as lying, the U-boat presently bobbed up again, but it soon submerged again. The guns turned toward it; twice as it poked its periscopes above the horizon only to withdraw them again and withdraw its horns when it gave a swish, like the for a trial shot.

On board the Remic, there was an intense eagerness to drop a depth bomb.

Bomb Breaks Loose.
Could this have been done the U-boat would have joined those which ever returned to Germany, but as far as it was impossible for the Remic to make more than two knots, it was impossible to drop a depth bomb without running the danger of almost as much damage to herself as to the enemy.

Through all the pain and excitement of his encounter, John Mackenzie did no more than his duty, which was neither more nor less than anybody else did.

But the greater danger was yet to come.

The depth bombs which the Remic crew had hatched to drop in the U-boat's neighborhood were kept in the hold, and the storm, of the night, had torn big, bulky things, tied with high explosive, safe enough while held in hands, but deadly if the two pins which held the firing mechanism were removed.

The waves breaking over the ship's stern tore one of the boxes loose, unsped it over, rolling the bomb out. All the box went overboard, but the bomb still and gashed and rolled about on the deck.

"The safety pins come out," someone called.

Every man of the crew realized the danger, for every shift of the bomb threatened destruction and death.

Captain's Raging Death.

To venture into that part of the ship, with the waves dashing over it, meant risk being carried overboard. The man who ventured into it with sudden death rolling around from side to side, after every lurch risked his life.

But Mackenzie did not hesitate an instant.

"I'll get it," he shouted.
The next moment he had flung himself down into the flooded rear deck and, on all fours, was reaching for the gurgling cylinder.

He had his arms almost about it when it broke away. He lunged for it again, but the dip of the ship spoiled his aim and once more it escaped him.

Waiting for what seemed a better chance, he made a third attempt to grab it. This time, just as he appeared to have his hands upon it, the Remic gave a roll, the gurgling, the huge charge burst upon him, almost crushing him. He barely saved himself, but burning quickly, fell upon the bomb and held it. Grasping it, in a momentary interval, he sat upon it, sat calmly until the heat could be rung him with which he dashed it down.

Savers Ship and Crew.

In recommending that the medal of honor, the highest decoration America has to give, should be conferred upon Mackenzie, the commanding officer of the Remic said:

"Mackenzie, in acting as he did, exposed his life and prevented the probable loss of the ship and entire crew. Had this depth charge exploded on the quarterdeck with the sea and wind blowing at the time, there is no doubt that the ship would have been lost."

During the destruction of the United States Navy, you will find the John Paul Jones, Decatur, Lawrence, Farragut, Porter, Dewey and Ingram.

"Where did you get that last name?" somebody asks. "The others are familiar, but who was Ingram?"

The Ingram is the first name of the man to be named after an enlisted man, and it was my pride and pleasure to break a long-established precedent by this honoring the memory of an American hero, who, in his life, never rose above the rating of a gunner's mate.

Oscar K. Ingram served on the Cassin, and the Cassin was patrolling in Irish waters—where submarines were thicker than almost anywhere else in the seas.

On October 15, 1917, the Cassin sighted a U-boat, and put on all speed to reach her spot where the periscope had shown from the quarry had suberged. The Cassin kept up the search for an hour, and then there was no sign of the enemy.

Time for Quick Action.
Then suddenly a torpedo was sighted. It was running at high speed and heading straight for the Cassin. When discovered it was less than 400 yards away. In order to avoid it, the Cassin must act in seconds—almost split seconds.

"Double emergency full-speed" was signaled to the engine room and the Cassin put hard astern.

But, as in the case of the Remic, the stern of the Cassin was stored with depth-charges. Gunner's Mate Ingram, cleaning the muzzle of his gun, saw that the torpedo was headed straight for the stern of the Cassin. If it exploded there, detonating the depth-charges, it might sink the ship.

Fully aware of the peril he was running, Ingram, without a minute's hesitation, ran aft and began to strip the depth-charges and throw them overboard.

The Cassin had made a quick turn, and for a moment it looked as if the torpedo might pass astern. But, when it was only 15 or 20 feet away, it leaped, porpoise-like, from the water and struck the ship.

Hero Instantly Killed.

There was a terrific explosion. Gunner's Mate Ingram was killed instantly. But the Cassin remained afloat.

With rudder gone and stern shattered, it kept going, even though it could go only in circles, and its crew, when the U-boat emerged to see what had happened, opened fire. Dismayed at this show of fight the U-boat ducked again and quit the combat.

Help came for the Cassin, and she was taken to port, repaired and returned to service.

But Gunner's Mate Ingram had given his life to save the ship and her crew.

That is why the long-established precedent was broken and an American naval ship was named after an enlisted man.

Neither think the American people will say I was justified in breaking the precedent.

There were so many deeds of daring, so many instances of personal bravery, that these seem to characterize the entire service and I feel so strongly that only opportunity was needed for any one of the half million to distinguish themselves, that I might write beside the whole service "Heroes All."

(The next article relating especially to crew of the U-boat appears that day. Special German blood in the war will appear in The Courier tomorrow.)

ODO BELIEFS OF JAPANESE

Popular Superstitions Have Mostly Sprung From Moral Precepts and Are Quite Harmless.

There are many popular, as distinguished from religious, superstitions in Japan. Those originally sprang from mostly moral precepts and are quite harmless. They prevail more widely among people in the rural and mountain districts than among city dwellers and among the older and ignorant classes than among the young and educated groups. Some of these superstitions are:

At a marriage ceremony a dress of purple color is taboo, lest the mutual love of the bride and groom be soon lost, as purple is a color most liable to fade.

If while a person is very ill a cup of medicine be upset by accident, it is a sure sign of his recovery; he needs no medicine no longer.

Kyô is the spirit of the god Kojin. It is supposed to have a purifying effect and must be respected. To step on fire, to throw refuse in it, will cause the wrath of the god and hence calamity. The bore is not unknown in Japan, and the Japanese are perturbed with visitors who sit their welcome out and drive their hosts into a frenzy of eagerness, to get rid of them. The Japanese recipe of getting rid of them is as follows: Go to the kitchen, turn the broom upside down, put a towel over it and fan it lustily. The indomitable visitors will soon depart.

Japanese babies and children are not allowed to look into mirrors, for if they do, when they grow up and marry they will have twins.

When measles, chickenpox or whooping cough prevails in a neighborhood and parents do not wish to have their children become infected they put a notice on the front door stating that their children are absent.

Paderewski's Dessert is Life.

Jo Davidson, the sculptor, who recently returned to the United States after many months in Europe, where many great men passed for him, relates the following passage between Clemenceau and Paderewski, which Davidson says occurred in his presence. "Clemenceau is a great old sort of fellow," Davidson relates. "He was receiving Ignace Paderewski, the great pianist, but who was Ingram?"

"Yes," replied the artist, bowing. "And you have just been elected premier of Poland."

Again Paderewski bowed and answered the affirmative.

Clemenceau looked at him a moment and then shook his head sadly, saying: "My God, what a come down!"

More for Tobacco Than Education. Americans spent $90,000,000 more for tobacco during the past year than they did for education, according to Philander E. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education.

Abbreviated Garments Approved by Both American and French Women

YANKEE DESIGNERS IN LEAD

Models From the United States Are Bought by Millions of Other Lands—Now Spring Creations Are Captivating.

American designers, writes a New York fashion correspondent, have done their best, places once and for all, as leaders in the ranks of fashion. Indeed one heard the women of fashion sighingly say, "Oh, if only I could have one of those American suits—or one of those American 'something else'." We are producing here some magnificently beautiful creations, pieces that are distinctly the expression of our own personalities.

They accuse us of dressing all alike. Well, if we do that is because the American women have refused to open their eyes sufficiently to the possibilities of these American creations, for they are not all designed alike by any manner of means, and any sameness in our dressing cannot be laid at the door of the artists who are working hard to set the pace along distinctive American lines.

The fashion shows this spring, particularly strictly American-made fashions, have been a treat to the eye, the evolution which once was apparent now disappearing, and one designs has shown of American gowns is much because of their fine points of design and construction, as because of their utter suitability to the figures which they are meant to adorn.

There is nothing which we do so well nor wear so well as the street suit for women, and there is nothing really, which we like so well. When we return from abroad having seen all the styles in the world, one's eyes are overjoyed at the sight of the American suit, so beautifully cut and fitted, so artistically worn. An American woman needs a suit in her wardrobe and if her circumstances are such that she can have nothing else, she, too, makes that suit in every occasion demanding her presence.

Our sport clothes, too, are a natural expression which has nowhere else been equaled. Our designers have combined grace and beauty, in this direction, with utility, and we have the assurance connected with any leading fashion.

Circular skirt is seen. Now and again among the newer American showings the circular skirt is seen. It is the only evidence we have of any widening of the skirt, but Here is a Suit of Two Materials Made on Conservative Lines and Which Should Appeal as a Street Outfit.

When it is circular it has the greatest amount of fullness used in its making. There are so many cases among the spring wraps, and these are so graceful, that they cannot be passed by unnoticed. They are made in every fashion, from the cape of heavy homespun to that of the lightest and softest of fabrics for evening wear. The cape coat has been forsaken in smart dressmaking circles for the cape or strictly cape lines, which sometimes is left severely plain and again embroidered or heavily trimmed in some way. One of these is made of heavy black satin with its lower edge embroidered for some distance with an arrangement of gray squirrel wool embroidery. It has a triple flounced collar that is in itself another cape.

Taffeta dresses are very much in favor for spring street wear. In fact, they vie with those of the Canton crepe. They have usually, fuller skirts, being made over lines that suit their texture best.

There are bonfire types in the Paris openings this spring, there are flights in a directorate direction, there are Spanish dances, but when all is measured, asserts a fashion authority, there remains the outstanding fact that straight lines are still a dominant characteristic and that the silhouette continues with slight divergences, practically the same as it has been. Of course, this is not meant to convey the impression that last year's frocks are good for this year. There is that subtle difference, slight though it may appear, upon the surface, that marks one of the newer gowns as distinctive. There is nothing doubt about it. It has its own marks of novelty and above everything else a spring like quality.

And so of the couturiers in Paris, it would seem, has ondone himself in the creation of gowns for this latest season. The collections have been unusually large and the examples are more wild than was expected. And the various types of gowns, it may be encouragingly reported, are thoroughly adaptable to the uses of the American woman.

Skirts Longer in Paris

Skirts are longer in Paris—that one point is an established thing, but just to prove that there is never one rule to govern the French couturier, Jenny has made all of her frocks and suits with skirts as short as ever they have been. To be sure, here are the youthful types, and, at any rate, those among the American women who now are rejoicing in very short skirts have Jenny to uphold their choice, they can refer to her decision if their judgment should hang in the balance.

Point, on the other hand, has dropped blouson skirts, it is a point below the ankle, and the "V" marking is full as full as can be, with positive points over the hipline. All of the other couturier blouson blousons these two levels. Call them shorter and some one else likes them longer, so there is at least a choice, and every woman has the privilege of choosing the one that becomes the best.

Skirts are fuller, too, than they have been. A few of them are circular in cut and another few "plated." Even the straight skirts that follow the line of the figure are allowed a little more roominess than they have had recently, though those for suits and street dresses are kept fairly conservative in width.

SOME CHARMING NEW WRAPS

Latest Outer Garment for Spring Wear is of the Coat and Cape Type.

Charming and very smart are the new coats which, though very few and far between, are beginning to make their appearance. One hesitates whether to dub them coat-capes, and compromised on "wrap," which quite satisfactorily covers them.

One of French fashions, drawn in rather closely about the waist, and some just below the bust, that is the only part of the old. This was straight, but cut in the lines of a more close and adjustable type, which came to be very popular, and turned in a wide, broad, silver-colored collar, very similar to the wrap.

Another interesting was another wrap of tomato red, which was not on the lines of the traditional circular cape.

At intervals in the fabric was woven wide double stripes of cream color, which ran through the material just below the bust, just above the waist, and also the elbow. The wrap was not wide, the fabric being narrow, and was then the same as that of the coat, and was the same as that of the coat.

Skirts have a short. They are very short, and are made to go with the coat, and the coat is made to go with the skirt, and the skirt is made to go with the coat.

The I. N. Hagan Ice Cream Co.

Expresses its sincerest appreciation of the interest displayed by the people of Connellsville in the First Annual Opening and desires that every person who visited the plant and those who were unable to be present consider themselves the recipient of a standing invitation to call at any time and avail themselves of any and all services the company offers.

Being one of Connellsville's newer industries, affording employment to residents of Connellsville, and—as is the case with other business establishments of the city—stimulating business in other lines of trade; the establishment of this factory here means the addition of another link to Connellsville's industrial chain.

"THE GREAT ADVENTURE"—A First National picture presenting Lionel Barrymore, the noted artist, is being shown today and will also be the feature attraction tomorrow. "The Great Adventure" is a comedy, adapted to the screen from the famous play of the same name by Arnold Bennett, and in it Barrymore has the role of the eccentric artist, pursued by a calculating humorist who seeks to marry him off to a widow. Mr. Primo, the artist, is played by Harry H. Corbett, his identity a posing, as his dead valet, "Foolish Love," the most remarkable of "adventures" this con man has had. When the valet is buried in an unoccupied crypt, Harry, now, Harry subsequently meets and marries the pretty young widow who mistakes him for the dead valet with whom she has been carrying on a romantic correspondence through a matrimonial agency; how he is forced to paint and sell his pictures for a song because of his deception; how he worms his way out of the serious difficulties which confront him when the deserted widow and two sons of his dead valet turn up to demand that he return home to them; and how he saves the art dealer who has been buying his pictures and selling them as originals from going to jail, constitute some of the most engaging situations in the picture.

THE PARAGON.

"COLORADO"—An entertaining picture, with Frank Mayo in the leading role, is the feature attraction today. The picture is in five acts and is filled with thrills. Mr. Mayo is supported by a well-chosen cast. The picture will also be shown tomorrow.

"Monday and Tuesday." "What a Wife Worth," a story of the unhappy soul of women which goes unafraid into the valley of death, will be shown. The two principal roles are played by that capable juvenile lead, Casson Ferguson, and sweet-faced and clever, Ruth Renick, Virginia Caldwell, Core, Drew, Alex French, and other well-known players among lovers of the screen complete the cast.

THE ORPHEUM.

"THE SKYWAYMAN"—A William Fox picture presenting Ormer Locklear, the greatest flier the world has ever known, is the feature attraction today and will also be shown tomorrow. This is the last and finest picture Locklear ever made. It sums up his life work, for in it he puts the fruit of all his years of experience as a flyer. It is a special production in every sense of the word. It abounds in excitement and thrill, not only because of its spectacular appeal, but because of the personality of Locklear himself. In "The Skywayman" Locklear performs his very latest feats, the result of all his experience. Not only does he change planes in mid-air—the exploit that first made him famous—but he does stunts unparalleled even in his own adventurous career. This great drama of the air will stand as a record of the courage of two American aviators who faced danger willingly for the cause of science. Locklear took long odds, not for the applause of the crowd or even for the love of the game alone, but because what he learned in the air was to be useful for all mankind. A unique feature of this picture is the fact that all the air photography was done "close up," so that every movement of Locklear, and even the expression on his face while changing planes and doing other stunts can be studied.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

The Adventures of A Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull
by CYRIL McNEILE "SAPPER" Illustrations by IRWIN MYERS
Copyright by Geo. H. Doran Co.

With a quick lunge he jerked the man off his feet, and lifted him up till his head was above the level of his own. Then clutching him tight, he commenced to climb. His own head was bent down, somewhere in the region of the man's back, and he took no notice of the feeble kicking legs.

Then at last he reached the fourth step, and gave a final adjustment to his semi-concious burden. He pressed his head even lower in the man's back, and lifted him up another three inches.

"How awfully jolly!" he mused, "I hope the result will please you."

"I'd stand quite still if I were you," said Peterson snarly. "Just listen."

The Hugh had gambled on, the performance was designed to frighten.

Most of the "something hit the back of the man he was holding with such force that it wrenches him clean out of his arms. The same the clang knocked him, and with a series of conscious thuds a body rolled down the stairs into the hall below.

"Ten feet!" he heard Lakington's voice, shrill with anger. "You've killed him." Switch on the light."

But before the order could be carried out Hugh had disappeared like a great cat into the darkness of the passage above. As luck would have it the first room he darted into was empty, and he flung open the window and peered out.

A faint, watery moon showed him a twenty-foot drop onto the grass, and without hesitation he flung his legs over the sill. And at that moment something prompted him to look upward.

It was a dormer window, and to an active man access to the roof was easy. Without an instant's hesitation he abandoned all thoughts of retreat; and when two excited men rushed into the room he was firmly ensconced, with his legs astride of the ridge of the window, not a yard from their heads.

Securely hidden in the shadow, he watched the subsequent proceedings with genial toleration. A raucous bellow from the two men announced that they had discovered his line of escape; and, in half a minute the garden was full of hurrying figures. One, calm and impulsive, his identity betrayed only by the inevitable cigar, stood by the garden door, apparently taking no part in the game; Lakington, blind with fury, was running round in small circles, cursing everyone impartially.

"The car is still there." A man came up to Peterson, and Hugh heard the words distinctly.

"Then he's probably over at Benton's house. I will go and see."

Hugh watched the thick-set, massive figure stroll down toward the wicket gate, and he laughed gently to himself. Then he grew serious again, and with a slight frown he pulled out his watch and peered at it. "Phew!" one, "two more hours before dawn. And in those two hours he's sprinted to explore the house from top to bottom; especially he wanted to have a look at the mysterious central room of which Phyllis had spoken to him. The room where Lakington kept his treasures. But until the excited throng below went indoors, it was unsafe to move. Once out of the shadow, any one would be able to see him crawling over the roof in the moonlight.

At times the thought of the helpless man for whose death he had in one way been responsible recurred to him, but he shook his head angrily. It had been necessary, he realized; you can carry someone upstairs in a normal house without him having his neck broken—but still . . . And then he wondered who he was. It had been one of the men who sat round the table—that of he was tolerably certain. But which . . . ? Was it that frightened bony, or the Bussian, or the gentleman with the bloodshot eye? The only comfort was that whatever had been, the world would not be appreciably poorer for his sudden decease. The only regret was that it hadn't been dear Henry.

He had a distaste for Henry which far exceeded his dislike of Peterson. "He's not over there," Peterson's voice came to him from below, "and we've wasted time enough as it is."

The men had gathered together in a group just below where Hugh was sitting, evidently awaiting further orders.

"Do you mean to say we've lost the young swine again?" said Lakington snarly.

"No, lost—merely mislaid," murmured Peterson. "The more I see of

WORN-OUT TIRED WOMEN

Mrs. Trotter Says She Recovered Her Strength and Vitality by Taking Vinol.

MRS. E. TROTTER

Toronto, Ont.—"I was weak, fadous and nervous. I had dizzy spells and no ambition to do anything. I saw Vinol advertised and tried it. In about one week I felt better, and it built me up and restored my strength. I want to recommend Vinol to other women who are weak, nervous and run-down,"—Mrs. E. Trotter, 15 Wardell street, Toronto.

There are hundreds of women in this vicinity who are in just such a condition as Mrs. Trotter was before she took Vinol. If such women would only realize that in a natural manner Vinol creates a hearty appetite, aids digestion, makes rich, red blood, quickens the circulation and strengthens every organ and muscle of the body, we would not be able to supply the demand. $1.00 per bottle, guaranteed. THREE.

It was half an hour before Drummond decided that it was safe to start exploring. First he took off his shoes, and tying the laces together, he stung them around his neck. Then, as steadily as he could, he commenced to scramble upward.

It was not an easy operation; one slip and nothing could have stopped him sliding down and finally crashing into the garden below, with a broken leg, at the very least, for his pains.

In addition, there was the risk of dislodging a slate—an unwise proceeding in a house where most of the occupants slept with one eye open.

But at last he got his hands over the ridge of the roof, and in another moment he was sitting straddlewise across it.

A sudden rattle close to him made him start violently; only to curse himself for a nervous ass the next moment, and lean forward eagerly. One of the blinds had been released from the moon, and a pale, diffused light came filtering out into the night from the side of the glass roof. He was still, craning backward and forward to try and find some chink through which he could see, when, with a kind of uncanny deliberation, one of the panes of glass slowly opened. It was worked by a ratchet from inside, and Hugh bowed his thanks to the unseen operator below. Then he leaned forward cautiously, and peered in. . .

The whole room was visible to him, and his jaw tightened as he took in the scene. In an armchair, smoking an unconcernedly as ever, sat Peterson. He was reading a letter, and occasionally underlining some point with a pencil. Beside him on a table was a big ledger, and every now and then he would turn over a few pages and make an entry. But it was not Peterson on whom the watcher above was concentrating his attention; it was Lakington, taking a red velvet box out of a drawer in the desk. He opened it lovingly, and Hugh saw the flush of diamonds. Lakington let the stones run through his hands, glittering with a thousand flames, while Peterson watched him contemptuously.

"How do you know she'll have them in the house?" said Lakington.

"Because dear Freddie has told me so," answered the girl. She blew two smoke rings and then laughed.

"Freddie is really rather a dear at times. I don't think we ever met any one who is so nearly an ideal without being one. Still," she repeated thoughtfully, "he's rather a dear."

"What," Lakington asked curiously, "does he think you are?"

"A charming young girl," answered Irma dourly, "whose father lost his life in the war, and who at present takes out a precarious existence in a government office. At least, that's what he told Judy Frimley—she's the woman of unassailable virtue. She was profoundly sentimental and seems a romantic, in addition to being a snob and scouting a future duke, to say nothing of a future duchess. By the mercy of Allah she's on a committee with his mother for distributing brown paper undershirts to destitute Belgians and so Freddie wanted an invite for her. Volla rour."

"Splendid," said Lakington slowly.

"Splendid. Young Ladley comes of age in about a week, doesn't he?"

"Blondy, to be exact; and so I go down with my dear aunt on Saturday."

Lakington nodded his head as if satisfied, and then glanced at his watch.

"What about him?" he remarked.

"Of course I can," said Peterson irritably; "but that doesn't alter the fact, it's inconvenient. Things will be shortly coming to a head here, and I want to be in the spot. However—" He started to walk up and down the room, frowning thoughtfully.

"Your fish is hooked, man 'unil," continued the girl to Lakington. "He has already proposed three times; and he has introduced me to a dreadfully-looking woman of extreme virtue, who has adopted me as her niece for the great occasion."

"What great occasion?" asked Lakington.

"Why, his coming of age," cried the girl. "I am to go to Ladley Towers as an honored guest of the duchess Commissioner Landis, writing a letter to Hugh Lacey, who introduced a measure to penalize crookedness in baseball in the Massachusetts legislature, expressed the opinion that there should be laws in every state that also would reach and punish every man who makes a bet on a ball game, in grand stand and bleachers. The best assurance of honest baseball, says Landis, is not to permit a bet to be made on a play or on the result of a game.
